

MORE MUSLIM

A narrative audio documentary series that explores the Muslim experience, with all its messiness.

OVERVIEW

More Muslim is the first narrative audio documentary series produced in Qatar focused on stories from Muslim communities around the world. Each episode is a narrative, transhistorical journey into one aspect of the Muslim experience that defined or is being defined by the modern world.

This season is a production of Al-Mujadilah Center and Mosque for Women and is focused on covering some of the most interesting stories in the Muslim world through the lived experiences of Muslim women.

Built by an international team of award-winning reporters, producers, and sound designers working across multiple countries, the show brings the kind of ambitious, cinematic storytelling associated with Radiolab and This American Life to stories from inside Muslim communities worldwide.

Season One includes nine documentaries spanning from the secret translators behind one of the world's most widely read English Qur'an, to Cape Town's fight to save its historic Muslim neighbourhood, to young Muslim women turning to AI chatbots for therapy.

QATAR'S FIRST NARRATIVE PODCAST

It is one of the only narrative audio documentary series currently being produced in the entire region. The production model is global but Qatar-anchored: editorially led from Doha, with reporting from correspondents across multiple continents. For Media City, this represents an opportunity to associate with a Qatar-originated property that is already competing in the same category as leading international narrative podcasts, reaching the educated, mobile, 22 to 45 demographic that premium content partners want access to. As Media City builds out its roster of flagship content, More Muslim is a ready-made example of world-class audio storytelling born in Qatar.

AUDIENCE

More Muslim launched from Doha and its audience reflects that. Qatar is the show's fourth-largest market globally, and the broader GCC represents a significant and growing share of listenership.

The show has been downloaded nearly 30,000 times across 148 countries in under three months and week-over-week growth has increased sevenfold from launch to peak.

More Muslim treats Muslim culture and history with the same editorial seriousness and production craft that the best international shows bring to any subject. The audience skews 22 to 45, university-educated, urban, and culturally engaged, very similar to the kind of audience that walks through Msheireb on a daily basis.

PROPOSED COLLABORATION

Media City

We're open to flexible partnership structures that fit Media City's programming and physical spaces, including:

- Cross-promotional placements across Media City partner platforms and properties
- Co-branded content tied to individual episode themes (AI, architecture, climate, women's issues, travel)
- Behind-the-scenes and making-of content for social and digital distribution
- Inclusion in Media City showcase materials as a flagship Qatar-produced audio property
- Joint event activations around Season Two launch

TEAM AND PRESS COVERAGE

The production team includes award-winning journalists and producers whose work has appeared on Radiolab, The Atlantic, NPR, BBC Radio 4, the New York Times, and Al Jazeera.

Season One has received editorial placement from Apple Podcasts and press coverage around the world on NPR, WNYC's The Brian Lehrer Show, PRI's The World, Transom, Kasurian (forthcoming), The Thinking Muslim (forthcoming), and more.
